PSALM 136:1–2 (NIV)

Dear friends,

As we write, the Canadians among us have already celebrated Thanksgiving, the Cameroonians are in the midst of it, and the Americans are anticipating the holiday.

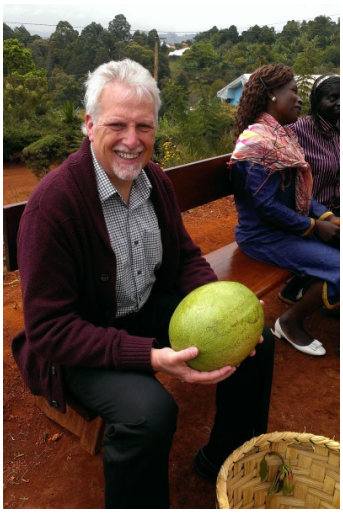

Whichever celebrations you take part in, we hope you have a joy-filled time!

In Cameroon, Thanksgiving isn't just a day, and there are no turkeys involved – it is a whole month or longer of Sunday church service celebrations.

Every Sunday in October is another Thanksgiving celebration. Each Sunday service features a different neighborhood or group. The choir, women, or youth dance in carrying their money, corn, beans, potatoes, sugar cane, other produce from their farms, chickens, or even goats. The offerings are all set at the front of the church, and then after the service is over, all the items are auctioned off.

An usher holds up the item and shouts "Offer" and the bidding begins. . .

Going once, twice and sold – and on to the next item.

It is a joy-filled event with a lot of laughter and sometimes brisk competition between bidders. It is celebration of thanksgiving.

And we do have a lot to be thankful for in Cameroon.

We are thankful for our partnership with the CBC – the Cameroon Baptist Convention – that has been making a difference in the lives of people in Cameroon in so many ways.

When the first NAB missionaries began their work in Cameroon and established the CBC, they had no idea of how God would bless and grow the CBC. Today, there are more than 1,500 CBC churches, a seminary, schools, hospitals, health centres, and more.

The NAB comes alongside the CBC in many different ways.

One way is through training residents in internal medicine and pathology. NAB missionary Dr. Rick Bardin has elevated the pathology lab at Mbingo Baptist Hospital (MBH) through years of hard work and dedication. He is involved in training Cameroonian staff and sharing his expertise to the benefit of patients all over Cameroon. Many different hospitals send samples to MBH, relying on the pathology department's advanced skills that will guide the treatment for hundreds of patients.

Another way the NAB is supporting the CBC is through the Chemotherapy Treatments Special Project.

Imagine receiving a cancer diagnosis, being told that you can be cured with the appropriate chemotherapy, but knowing you do not have the money to pay for the treatment. This was the situation that 25-year-old Pelagie found herself in. Her family had joined together to support her with funds to pay for the first rounds of chemotherapy, but there was nothing more they could give. This is where the Chemotherapy Treatment Special Project came to Pelagie's aide. Now, this young woman has completed her chemotherapy treatment and has returned home with a great deal of hope for the future. To give to this special project, click here.

Another way the NAB is supporting the CBC is through the Crisis Relief Fund.

The conflict in the Northwest and Southwest Regions continues to negatively impact lives. The NAB and the CBC are working together to provide assistance to people through the Cameroon Crisis Relief Fund. Medical care, medical bill assistance, assistance for internally displaced persons, and prison ministry are just some of the ways. Christians visit prisons to provide food, share the Good News, and pray for the prisoners. Many have been swept up as a result of the conflict and are suffering in overcrowded prisons without beds or even mattresses and inadequate food. One prisoner told the team, "I thought God had forgotten about me. You came and shared food, read the Bible, and prayed for me. I now have hope."

In addition to this support, two kinds of workshops on trauma healing, peace, and transformation are offered.

One is focused on assisting individuals who are dealing with the trauma of the conflict. The other provides special training to seminary students and pastors so they can help the people in their communities deal with the trauma and losses they have experienced.

You can partner with us in ministering to victims of the crisis with your donation. Go to nabconference.org/give/cameroon-crisis-relief.

At the end of November, we will be on our way to Cameroon, where once again Maureen will meet with CBC leaders to evaluate and plan and explore future opportunities. Craig will return to Rain Forest International School to assist in the finance department.

And we are excited to have the NAB VP of International Missions accompanying us on this trip. Rev. Joel David is making his first trip to Cameroon to meet with the NAB missionaries there and also meet with CBC leaders. We look forward to introducing Joel to this country we love!

Thank you for faithfully partnering with us in Cameroon.

Grace and Peace,

Craig & Maureen Moody
